Mr. Creel – Thank you for your E-mail. Officer Carlson was contacted by a Julian Cauvin regarding a 2006 burglary case in which a “Michael Creel” was the suspect. At this point, we have no reason to believe that a crime has been occurred by you or that you are the Same Michael Creel. No police report was taken, as there was no crime at this time. You may want to block the user from your social media accounts.

Thank you,

Officer Seth Tyler

Letter from Mike admitting he sends information to my neighbours and Police Never followed up on my burglaries and forgeries

I'M NOT DOING SHIT. I'M NOT CHANGING SHIT. I DON'T GIVE A FUCK WHAT YOU DO.

Now, when I typed it all in caps like that, did it help? I can add bold to it if it makes it easier. Your mistake was in coming at me pretending to be something you're not, a legal genius. As you said, those things have been up for years, and...it's all true. You can't claim defamation because you'd have to prove it wasn't true, and it is. Everything on the site was acquired legally through public sources; anyone could find the things themselves, I just make it easy by putting it all in one central location.

Also, I actually live in Louisiana, so you'll likely need to file your case in Louisiana; that's even where the site is registered. You're not the first person that's screamed "I'll sue you!!!" at me, and no one has prevailed thus far. I know you think you're a lawyer, but you might want to get a real one, just a suggestion.

Now here's the real catcher, before you start posting your wild claims about me, you better make damn sure their all true (and their not). Obviously all your claims about me partaking in a burglary can be proven false, the Police were not convinced as the email shows. I was never even asked to come down and give a statement. Your assistant Marcia did store a few things of yours in my house because she didn't have the room, and your house was being sold at a foreclosure auction in a matter of days. She went to their office in Factoria and asked them what would become of your furniture if it was sold, and they said anything in the house went with the house.

So, being completely suckered by you and still thinking the moon set on your head, even after you stole her blind, destroyed her credit, and pretty much caused a mental breakdown, she still loved you. You have never owned anything that I wanted Julian, not then, and not now. So when you publicly proclaim that I burglarized your home, and I prove that to be false, you are in fact liable for defamation.

This case you mention in Louisiana, it's not me idiot. I don't know who it is, but I know I've never had so much as a traffic ticket in LA. So again, that's defamation. Last but not least, the big Texas case; I was arrested (age 18), but never convicted, never sentenced, and never locked up for even 5 minutes over it. I gave a ride home to an idiot friend who as at turned out had stolen some money before coming to my house for a ride; and when he got caught, I got caught up in it. I didn't do it, so he went to jail, not me. He's now as crazy as you and thinks he's the Anti-Christ.

Your disgusting low-life crimes are too numerous and too vile to even get into. So maybe I need to call my private detective friend and drop a little cash to see exactly where you are. Then I will also start mailing out the truth; the legal courtroom docs that detail your criminal history, and we'll see what your neighbors and associates think. The women may burn your house down; they've been a little upset lately about the press, and I'm pretty sure they won't like what they read. I know they didn't like it at your office in California, huh? That was awkward wasn't it?

This statement here upbove showing he sent letters to my employer in california
