Hi,

You just wrote: “ I am sorry but I am unable to answer any of your questions.”

That means you could be more involved in this situation than you told me. In consequence you will get a summons as a witness in court to testify...

Regards,

Jacques Cochin

Dear James,

Apologizes if you are not the owner/maker of this fake, but questions comes:

- As the car has been into your hands in January 2016 (see photo on your website were you wrote: “A 910 Porsche in the shop for some sorting out”)) for how long do you know the frame n° is welded on this car ?

- What is the name and location of the owner/maker of the car ? As obviously you knew him.

- When was the last time you saw it ?
- Have you other pictures and especially on the welded frame N° ?
- Do you know if he had relatives: children etc...?

Please understand that is very important for me to have the maximum of infos to stop this counterfeit. This will be on the market soon, so the right holders could have many problems for misrepresenting the car ...

Jacques Cochin

Well Jacques, thanks for the communication. Firstly the "910" here in NC is not mine nor did I make it, nor do I have anything to do with it, other than knowing the owner, who has recently passed away in an auto accident. It sounds like there is a story here-I would like to hear it. I always wondered about that "910". We will never know from the present owner since he is no longer with us, and he was never very forthcoming about some of his things.

I must inform you that I'll sue you for that if you persist to write that the 910 clone you made is 910-023, as I own the real and only one 910-023...for 20 years...

I will not tolerate that a fake frame number exist against a true blue chip. I send that immediately to Porsche USA. Your fake has a good chance to be destroyed.
